Mr. Michels assorts many changes still are taking place in the making and, marketing of cheese. Some of the changes, he says, have proven detrimental to the business, but countless others have been of real merit. At the present time, changes take place nearly every menth, the latest being the marketing of the one-pound loaf.

Referring to methods of manufacture, the expert tracing the history of methods, says 49 years aga all cheddar cheese (American) was manufactured by the method known as "hand stirred" or "granular curd." In the early nineties, a method them known, as "granular washed cird," now called "Colby washed curd process," was introduced into this country by Professpr J. W. 150 NEW BOOKS FOR CHILDREN ISSUED

All of the 150 books purchased by the public library in observance of Children's book week have now been placed in circulation, according to the children's librarian.

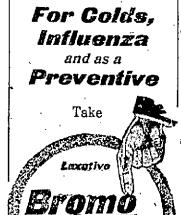

Among the new titles, which have not heretofore been announced, are the "Rootabaga Stories" and the "Rootabaga Stories" and "Poyages of Dr. Doollitte," by Hugh Lofty, winner of the national prize for children's literature.

For boys, three new books by R. II. Borbour, "Nid and Nod," "Rightend Emerson," and "For the Good of the Team," are good stories, as is "Grit A-Plenty," by Wallace.

Both artifies are neal known in Tanasulla. noon, at the Colonial club. Both artists are well known in Janesyllie, having appeared here many times.
For her first number Miss Gogg gave "Scene and Prayer" from the opera "Freischutz." Von Weber and "Invocation To Eros," Kersteiner. In this number, the soprane, exhibited artistic qualities. The warm fresh burity of her volce, the clear diction, and the brilliant interpretation, endeared her to the audience.
For her second number, Miss Gogg sang, "Arise" from "The Death of Joan of Are;" "The Heart of A Rose," Warren; and two folks songs of little Russia by Ziballst. The singer was generous in her encores

Thin Argument.

Hearings have been held in Kansas City for many days on farm freight rates, particularly as to wheat rates to seaboard. They have been attended by many growers, representatives of the railroads and by members of the interstate commerce commission who have listened to the evidence. Reading the testimony, as reported in the newspapers of Kansas City, and much space has been given to it, one does not get a high opinion of the reasons advanced by the railroads for refusal to reduce rates for export grain. In fact the antagonism of the railroads is accentuated and the reaction for the farmer is again a determination to hammer the roads.

It seems strange that these antagonisms cannot be climinated and the roads place themselves in a position where criticism is not openly invited. It is absurd to tell men, who know they are selling wheat at less than it costs to produce, that they are richer than ever. It is more absurd to say that the farmer who has to pay 11% cents more a bushel from a central shipping point in Kansas to get his grain to scaboard than he did in 1913, will not receive the benefit of the reduced rate. No consideration whatsoever has been given, as the testimony and speeches show, for the depreciation in the farmer's crop purchasing power and the inflation in the products he buys. It is not a question for radical action, because there is no radical action to be taken. But I is a question for consideration with a proper starting point.

"The export price of the community determines the price of grain," said one of the railroad spokesmen. Therefore, he added, the small amount of grain to be carried in proportion to the amount used for domestic purposes, would produce no greater return even though it did get to seabourd with a less rate for transportation. Take the Wichita rate for instance to scaboard,-.11% cents higher than in 1913, and note the amount of difference which some one would receive. If the 1913 rate applied on 100,000,000 bushels of export grain. It means $411,250,000 for someone. The experience in the past'is that the growers whose grain is sent from Wichita, or any other average shipping point with about the same rate, would be the recipients of that sum. The amount for Kansas would pay nearly all the taxes for state purposes. And yet this is the argument put up as a serious consideration by the representatives of railroads.

Hiram's hat dropped so gently into the ring that it must be a soft one.

As to Pumpkin Pie.

It is at this time of the year, when the profound thinking editor of the metropolitan paper turning away from the sordid, trite and usual things of everyday existence, soars into the realm of poesy and writes feelingly of the pumpkin pie. Annually this comes about the time the president issues his Thanksgiving Day proclamation, Annually, too, there is spread with poetic license, much misinformation about the golden pumpkin. It is to correct this hazy, backward view of the sumpkin pie that we take our pen in hand. In ing food in its raw state, than the numbkin, True, the cows will cat greedily of it and it will have a richening effect on the milk, but for the average human being it would be even too much to sentence a bootlegger to live on raw or plain, cooked pumpkin. We would not ask the governor of Wisconsin to try it.

The pumpkin pie made in the restaurant or in wholesale lots by the bakeries, is not the ple of which Whittier sang and to which rhapsodical literature has frequently been dedicated. In those days of the Pligrims at Plymouth and since, handed down from generation to generation and spread over the nation from coast to coast along the parallels of latitude of New England, pumpkin ple became a thing elevated beyond the more human idea of something ordinary to eat. Pumpkin was only the substructure, and upon this basis was built, from eggs and rich milk and spices and that something else, known only as the "knack" of cooking—something that never can be learned but must be in the soul, like music and harmony and the mechanical ability to finger instrumental keys-a ple that called for encores and youthful surreptitious visits to the pantry later on. One of the southern centlemen who writes about pumpkin pie is iconoclastic enough to say that the best pumpkin pio can be made from carrots or squash. He adds that in the south a pie, far better than the pumpkin, is made from yellow yams and sweet potatoes. We have no discussion with a man of that low character. He reasons from the disadvantages of birth and surroundings. One may have an emotion over his statements but it is only one of fity for crass ignorance.

New England gave us Thanksgiving Day and the pumpkin ple. The New Englander gave the south the cotton gin and made the southern states rich long years ago but it failed to present the people below Mason and Dixon's line the secret of e joyous Thanksgiving Day—the turkey and cranborries and the pumpkin pie. These are heritages of the north and yellow yams can pever. never, take them from us.

BUYING OR BUILDING A HOME

Washington .- The man who plans to buy or bulld a home has been said to need the expert advice of a real estate dealer, a builder, a carpener, an architect, a banker, a building and loan association, a landscape gardener, a plumber, an lectrician, and a city building inspector. To get all that in the ordinary course of commercial or professional service would cost him at least a housand dollars.

He can get it from the government through the division of building and housing of the depart ment of commerce for 5 cents. That insignifican sum will secure him a compilation of the best ex pert opinion that the department has been able to command. It is one of the results of Sec retary Hoover's program of cooperation betwee the government and all building interests to es tablish better and more uniform standards for house construction and to disseminate information as to housing facilities. Numerous standards for building materials have been fixed and accepted by the building trade. Standard plans for small homes have been pre-pared and are available to the public at a nominal cost, and the architects are now working out a series of unit houses which give promise that ul timately home owners may enlarge or repair their houses merly by ordering "parts" or "units.

The government experts will tell you how much to pay for a house and the percentage of your income to devote to monthly or annual payments. They will advise you as to the amount of savings required, how to take care of your savings, and as to all phases of the financial operations you must see through in the course of acquiring a home. They have suggestions to offer as to the ocation of a home with reference to transportafion facilities, land values, character of the neigh borhood, proximity of schools, parks, and playgrounds, and having the title examined. the house itself they have ideas that you may make yours with regard to general arrangement living room and fireplace, dining room, kitchen, bedrooms and closets, bathroom, stairways, base ment, exterior and setting. And when it comes to the actual building they will tell you about getting a permit, choosing a contractor, paying him and checking him up on the things that car not be seen.

The first big question, if not the most important for the would-be home owner to settle is as to how much he should pay for his property. This lock not mean the determination of the value of the real estate he is to acquire, and the cost of building, but rather how much he can afford to invest on the basis of his income. The government specialists in that line, after making exten sive researches, have come to the conclusion that the value of house and lot ordinarily should be between one and two-thirds and two and a half times the family income. This makes the usual proportion twice the income.

Thus the man with a $2,000 income can afford to own a $4,000 home, while the man with $5,000 year can pay for and malptain a $10,000 estab ishment.

Of course this estimate is not a hard and fast one. Differing conditions make for fluctuations in it. For example, a family living in a small town and having a garden and small poultry yard can afford a more expensive home thin a family with the same income living in a city or suburb with higher taxes nd street car or railroad fares to add to the cost of living. No definite rule or recommendation is made as to the percentage of the income that can or should be devoted to paymy for the house and meeting the other expenses incident to owning a home.

However, it is pointed out that a family that is paying a sixth of its income for rent should be able to devote at least a fourth to buying and maintaining a house, for the amount thus used may include both rent and savings. In addition to interest payments and instalments on the principal of a foan, however, allowance must be made for renewals and repairs, taxes, special assessments, insurance, water tax, fuel and other items that families accustomed to living in apartments cometimes overlook when making their homeowping plans.

The government experts have worked out a table that is of great interest to home builders. It shows the value of the house and lot that can be afforded on un income of a certain amount or range, the amount of the first cash payment that must be made as a minimum, the amount of the loan that will be carried on the property, the amount that must be paid as interest and amortization, the estimated taxes, insurance and unkeep, the total annual expenses, the amount of savings included in that item and the part of the comparable with rent. It is stated that the table does not attempt to set up arbitrary standards, but is fairly typical and should be useful as a basis from which to figure.

The table shows that a family with an income of from $1,200 to $1,800 should be able to handle a $3,000 property. The first cash payment would be $600, leaving a loan of $2,400, on which the interest and amortization charge at 12 ½ per cent would be $300, or $25 per month. Taxes, insurance, and upkeep are estimated at $120, making a total annual payment of $420, or $35 per month; of which $150 may be regarded as savings, during the first year, and $270 as expenses comparable with rent. If the payments are made regularly the property will be free of debt in about 12 years.

There were $1,000 to $2,400 $2,000 to $2,000. liself there is no more unattractive and uninvit- interest and amortization charge at 12 % per cent

Incomes of $1,600 to $2,400, $2,000 to $3,000, $2,400 to $3,600, $2,800 to $4,200, $3,200 to $4,800, $3,600 to $5,400 and $4,000 to $6,000 are worked out similarly in the table. On a $5,000 income, which is the average of the figures used in the final computation, a $10,000 home could be acquired. The annual payment would be $1,400, of which $300 would be expenses comparable to

The government guide to home building says that plans should be designed by some competent person or bought from some organization that provides a complete; plan service, such as the Architects' Small House Service Eureaus, which are non-profit-making organizations, endorsed by the department of commerce. National head-quarters of this service are at 1200 Second Avenue South, Minneapolis, and regional bureaus are maintained in New York City, Denver, Milwankee, Portland, Ore., Indianapolis, and Pittsburgh. Each regional bureau specializes in plans for small homes especially adapted to its local territory, but does not undertake to supply plans for houses of more than six rooms. The handbook contains statistics on home ownership by states, regional groups of states, and the principal cities of the country.

"Under certain elreum-stances," according to Brook-hart, Kenyon could be "in-

Considered to run.

Kenyon resigned his senate seat last year to accept the judgeship offered him by President Harding. The Iowan had served eleven years in the upper house when he stepped out. He entered that body April 12, 1911 for the first time, having been elected to fill the seat left years by the death of Jonathan P. Dolliver. Kenyon was re-elected Jan. 22, 1913 and again in 1918.

Though claimed by Iowa as one of its notables Kenyon was born in Elyria. O., June 10, 1862. He was educated at Iowa college and at the law school of the University of Iowa.

Looking away. I encountered the eye of Mr. Jackson. Its language was numistakable. I felt myself in a trap.
But I would not yield without smother-effort. Smiling taintly, I said: "You have never liked me, Nurse Weatthy; why, them drag me into this? Let me go. Mr. Jackson will be a symputhetic listener, I know," "I cannot let you go; but I can go myself," she retorted, rising slowly and turning her bark upon me. She was trembling in sheer desperation as she took a step towards the door. I could not see her go. I was not her sole auditor as on the night before. My duty seemed plain.
"Come back," I called to her. "Spoak, and I will listen."
She drew a deep breath, loosened her veil, but did not lift it; then quietly resented herself.

It seems strange that when the W. I. A. A. rules there shall be no sate grid title, nor any claims to one. Mr. Neverman does not see to it that the stories coming from his city cease to contain the claim of "champion." Marinette is justified in large measure for being proud of its team. Wisconsin in all sections pays its respect to Marinette as a football school. The condition only goes to show that there still is a public derinand for some way of deciding the state grid honors, a demand that will not be quashed by a.-W. I. A. A. ruling against it.

Dyer Is Great Star.

The score indicates the masterful manner in which Capt. Dyer ran the squad. His choice of plays and the way in which he skillfully mixed them, proves his generalship. He drove through the line, ran interference and passed the ball for good gains repeatedly. When relieved at quarter by Feinberg, the same strander generalship that brought the little regular his reputation as a dangerous man kept the team at high speed. At fullback Warren seemed able to make substantial gains whenever sent at the line. His defensive work was above anything displayed in his previous games.

The first score came early in the opening period when Euller pleked on the bound, a kick blocked by one of his mates. Eostad failed to make the extra point on a drop kick. It the second quaster, liostnd failed.

we have frequently been asked We have frequently been asked this question before, so we may repeat in our answer this time. Most leams play their game on the basis of never passing in their own territory and of only passing in their opponent's territory under necessity and on the thiel down. Also, most teams prefer to klek-off, rather than to receive. All such rules must be discarded under certain conditions. For example, if a toam is playing in the fourth quarter and its opponents have the lead, it seems reasonable to drop the rule about kirking-off in order to receive the kick-off and grithe halt. The sole chance to regain the lead, and win the game is dependent upon possession of the dependent upon possession of the Question—"What is football generalship?"

I contail generalship has been well described as follows: "Anything that a quarterback does and gets away with is good generalship." You can get hundreds of good rules for running a game, but no two games are ever alike. Thus the quarterback most valuable to a team is one able to size up every opponent and every situation that arises in every game.

We have frequently been asked this question before, so we may team abandons these so-called stand-and rules governing play and falis to get away with its stuff, the quar-terback is teyined a "block head." school is a thing of the past. Students came from points as far north as Bloomer, Wiss, and from all points in southern Wisconsin. Some were from Illinois. The parade Saturday morning was worth the effort put into it by the faculty and student body, and was much praised by the town people. The evening was spent enjoying a play at the gymnasium.
